WEEKLY NEWS UPDATES IN PROSTATE CANCER

In this edition:

CONSIDER ORGOVYX TO TREAT ADVANCED PROSTATE CANCER

ORGOVYX, the drug that will eventually replace Lupron or Zoladex for the treatment of advanced prostate cancer, is now readily available. This is the only androgen deprivation therapy (ADT) medicine that is not given in the form of an injection. The significance is fewer side effects; the drug also represents a shift from an office injection procedure to an at-home, daily pill. This represents quite a leap forward in anti-androgen therapy.
